

L.A. NOW

LOCAL

Will Lori Loughlin's daughters testify against her in college admissions scandal?

By RICHARD WINTON

MAY 31, 2019 | 5:30 PM

Lori Loughlin with daughters Olivia Jade Giannulli, left, and Isabella Rose Giannulli at an event in Beverly Hills on Feb. 28. Loughlin and her husband Massimo Giannulli were charged along with nearly 50 other people in the college admissions scandal. (Chris Pizzello / Invision/Associated Press)

Lori Loughlin has vowed to fight charges in the college admissions scandal.

But as her attorneys craft her defense to allegations that she and her husband used bribes to get their children into college, legal experts said they must weigh whether the fight will lead to their children being called to testify against them.

Loughlin, her husband and several other defendants in the college admissions scandal face another court date Monday. It will probably take months for their defense strategy to take shape.

Lara Yeretsian, a criminal defense attorney who was part of Scott Peterson's and Michael Jackson's legal teams, said that if Loughlin and Giannulli are willing to risk going to trial, they may find jurors and a judge more sympathetic than prosecutors.

PAID CONTENT

What Is This?

Can a big state university really aspire to 'make life better for all humankind'? You'd better...

As UCLA celebrates its centennial anniversary, now is an ideal time to assess the university's relevance to humanity at large. Fortunately, that relevance is easily...

SEE MOREBy UCLA UCLA

“They may very well have an affirmative defense: Yes, they paid a lot of money to get their daughters into college, but they may not have known that the money was being used to bribe college officials. They may have truly believed that they were supporting a legitimate nonprofit cause,” she said.

But, she cautioned, the couple could also have to face their own daughters — Olivia Jade and Isabella Rose — as witnesses for the prosecution. Neither so far has received a target letter suggesting she would face charges, but that wouldn't preclude prosecutors from putting them on the stand to help with the federal government's case.

Yeretsian said prosecutors “can require the daughters to testify.”

The value of their testimony depends on what the children knew.

“The fact that the daughters haven't been charged in the case tells me that they really didn't know or understand that something illegal was happening,” Yeretsian said. “Posing for pictures for athletic teams is a far cry from knowing the money their parents paid Singer was being used to bribe college officials and coaches. We know of no evidence showing they knew about the bribery.”

RELATED: For Lori Loughlin, ‘parenting on steroids’ could be a defense in the college admissions scandal

Their legal team is probably banking in part on William “Rick” Singer, the admitted mastermind of the scheme, being a less than star witness.

The couple is alleged to have paid him $500,000 to help get their daughters into USC. But a source familiar with the defense casts them as unwitting pawns in Singer's scheme of using a side door to guarantee college admissions,

Loughlin and Giannulli, had no sense they were engaging in any kind of crime, hence their not-guilty pleas and continued reluctance to plead out, said the source, who spoke to The Times on the condition of anonymity.

Loughlin and Giannulli are accused of paying to have their two daughters admitted to USC as crew recruits. Though neither is a rower, the parents saw being a coxswain as their daughters' ticket into the private college, according to an affidavit filed in federal court.

Authorities allege the couple agreed to take advantage of what Singer called his “side door” into the university by bribing USC senior associate athletic director

Donna Heinel to designate their older daughter as an athletic recruit on the crew team. Heinel is also charged in the scheme and has pleaded not guilty.

The money that authorities say eventually made its way to college coaches involved in the scam was funneled through Singer's charity, whose stated mission was to help "underprivileged students." This allowed some of the parents to write off the bribes as donations on their taxes, authorities said.

ADVERTISEMENT

After their older daughter's admission was secured, Loughlin and Gianulli repeated the scam in 2017 with their younger daughter, authorities allege. Singer allegedly told the couple he would present their daughter as a crew coxswain for the L.A. Marina Club team and requested they send an "action picture." The couple sent him a photo of their daughter on a rowing machine, according to the affidavit.

---

Essential California Newsletter

Monday - Saturday

A roundup of the stories shaping California.

---

Richard Winton

Richard Winton is a crime writer for the Los Angeles Times and part of the team that won the Pulitzer Prize for Public Service in 2011. Known as @lacrimas on Twitter, during 20 years at The Times he also has been part of the breaking news staff that won Pulitzers in 1998 and 2004. He won the ASNE Deadline News award

ADVERTISEMENT

COMMENTS (37)

Los Angeles Times

MOST READ

COMPANY TOWN

The women of MSNBC are reshaping the television landscape

JUN 6, 2019

L.A. NOW

Lori Loughlin and husband could face legal conflict with USC over admissions scandal

JUN 6, 2019

WORLD

Benjamin Netanyahu's not-so-secret weapon: his son Yair, the Israeli leader's defender in chief

56m

COLUMN ONE

Bob Hope house in Palm Springs, long an architectural footnote, approaches masterpiece status

JUN 6, 2019

L.A. NOW

Attempt to plug a wasp nest sparked the biggest wildfire in California history

JUN 6, 2019

LATEST L.A. NOW

Armed man barricaded in San Gabriel home killed by gunfire; 10 Freeway reopened

JUN 6, 2019

4 shot during soccer practice at Northern California park; police say it was gang-related

JUN 6, 2019

After failed funding campaign, L.A. Unified chief outlines budget plan

JUN 6, 2019

Man sentenced to 32 years for Westside sexual assaults

JUN 6, 2019

Man with 'edged weapon' is shot and killed by police in Atwater Village

JUN 6, 2019

ADVERTISEMENT

Batiste EST 1977

INSTANTLY REFRESHED HAIR
- AND OFF YOU GO!

AdChoices

SHOP NOW

Sign up for our newsletters

Subscribe for unlimited access

About/Contact

Archives

Classifieds

Terms

Site map

Advertising

Corrections

Privacy policy

L.A. Times careers

Find a job

Shop

Copyright © 2019, Los Angeles Times